A "Ruby" Jewel of a Season!

The Devil & Daniel Webster

Taken from the classic story of the same name by Stephen Vincent Benét. Jabez Stone is a poor nineteenth-century farmer who sells his soul to a mysterious stranger in exchange for seven years of wealth and prosperity. At the end of seven years, however, Jabez has second thoughts and calls in the great American statesman Daniel Webster to argue his case before a supernatural judge and jury. In a trial that borrows as much from "Law and Order" as it does the original story, Daniel and the Devil square off in a battle of Titans over the disposition of not only Jabez's soul, but Daniel's as well.

There Goes The Bride

Wedding bells are ringing, flowers are blooming, the bride is blushing, and the father of the bride is -- well, delusional. There Goes the Bride finds executive Timothy Westerby, already coping with the chaos of his job as well as his daughter's wedding day, cracking under the pressure in an amusing, and at times, musical manner. Throw in some angry Australian in-laws, some slightly senile grandparents, a tearful bride-to-be and you have a wedding farce you will not want to miss!

Five Southern women who were on their college swim team many years ago, set aside a long weekend every August at a beach cottage on the North Carolina Outer Banks to recharge their relationships. Their lives have taken different paths. This play focuses on four of these weekends spread out over the years. The results are lots and lots of laughs and some poignant moments as these unforgettable women join in revelry, clashes, and surprisingly hilarious and touching scenes. A must see!
